

Binghamton, N. Y., Feb. 11, 1861

Dear Brother:-

You forgot to leave me the ticket. If you have not thought of it, and already sent it to me at North Brookfield, please wait till you hear from me again. I think I shall meet Kellogg at Rome. If I so decide when I reach No. Brookfield about noon today I will write again.

I am feeling better. Please keep shady as to my plans to keep Lucinda May Davis and Mother from going to California. And keep Haskell with you as long as you can and make him happy. It would nearly ruin my prospects for book should he ~~take~~ take them with him now.

I will see your book through all right, and shall be glad to help you in any way.

Dear Brother I fear and love God. I love his truth and his cause. I wish Elder Haskell was an open book frank man, so I need not watch him. I fear the result of his policy course. Help him all you can.

Haste

James White.

COPY