Against Religious Intolerance

Church-State Council Calls for Action by the U.N.

A call for swift action on the convention to eliminate religious intolerance has been sent to the United Nations by the Church-State Council meeting at the Pacific Union Conference office in Westlake Village, California, two weeks ago.

Noting that nearly three decades have passed since the Declaration of Human Rights was introduced before the General Assembly, the Council observed that religious intolerance and persecution is greater now than when the world body first considered the emancipatory document which called for freedom of thought, conscience and religion.

On the eve of December 10, 29th anniversary of the general human rights resolution, efforts have centered largely in the stretch to world peace. Action on the international convention stressing elimination of all forms of intolerance and of discrimination based on religion or belief has been referred for the past 15 years, explained John V. Stevens, president of the Council.

"We feel it is imperative that the U.N. pass the convention, making it possible for everyone to enjoy the freedom of belief so basic to the dignity of man," he said.

Stevens was one of 33 representatives sent by his Church to visit 15 nations on the 20th anniversary of the original U.N. declaration. The delegates met both political and religious leaders in the six-week tour which included Eastern Orthodox, Jewish, Moslem, Protestant, Roman Catholic and Socialist nations.

"We were received cordially and made some very concrete gains for peoples of all religious convictions," Stevens remembers.

"Because intolerance problems are evident in every nation, we feel the issue must be handled quickly by the U.N. General Assembly," Stevens said.

"Many parts of the world continue in foment and turmoil through a variety of intolerances and we must begin to deal with man's inhumanity to man," he concluded.

The Adventist Church-State Council is composed of 25 lay and clergy members of the Church in the five-state West.

Pastor-chaplain Assigned to Medical School in Guadalajara

For many years some Seventh-day Adventist young people seeking to enter the medical profession have studied in Guadalajara, Mexico, because Loma Linda University could not accommodate everyone who sought such training.

Adventists attending the Universidad Autonoma of Guadalajara have often felt lonely, isolated as they have been from their culture, language and home influences.

Pastor-chaplain W. E. Baxter, Jr. (formerly Northern California) has been assigned to this post and the University Adventist Church meets in rented quarters in a centrally located church building. Services are conducted in English, and the church also operates a two-teacher church school.

Recently the student group took the initiative in searching for and obtaining a commodious building which now houses the Student Center and church school. The General Conference and the Inter-American Division not only gave their solid approval to this project but also contributed generously.

The student center is now the very "hub" of their missionary activities—a place where they can conduct cooking schools, hold Five-Day Plans to Stop Smoking, and other outreaches.

Adventists can be proud of the impact that has been made by this group of students, especially upon others in professional careers. As a result, each year numerous baptisms take place.

Recorder readers will be pleased that these young people can have this added advantage as they continue their studies in a non-Adventist university.

INSPIRATION SAYS

"My Spirit alone is competent to teach and to convict of sin. Externals make only a temporary impression upon the mind. I will enforce truth on the conscience, and men shall be My witnesses, throughout the world asserting My claims on man's time, his money, his intellect. . . . Let the gospel be sent to all parts of the world, awakening burdened souls to inquire, 'What must I do to be saved?'"

AHA Recognizes Adventist Outreach

An Adventist missionary outreach program has been recognized by the American Hospital Association. Hospitals, the journal of the AHA, printed a six-page feature and picture story of the Luziero outreach program on Brazilian waterways in its October 1, 1977 issue.

Fifty years ago, Leo Halliwell and his wife Jessie began this outreach with a small launch they named "Luziero," or light-bearer. In addition to his service as a missionary, Leo was an electrical engineer and a student of tropical diseases.

Today this outreach works in cooperation with the Seventh-day Adventist Hospital in Belém, and uses a flagship, four launches and an amphibious airplane to reach the rural population of the Amazon basin.

Crew of the flagship consists of Capt. Eric Moonere, who has training as a paramedic, and his wife, Francoise, a registered nurse. Seaman Luis Gonzaga da Silva assists the captain; his wife prepares the meals.

Two cabins of the flagship have been equipped to handle medical and dental consultations, physical examinations

Loma Linda University Names Trust Officer

New to Loma Linda University is H. Reese Jenkins, director of trust development. Elder Jenkins replaces W. I. Unterseher who retired earlier this year.

Elder Jenkins, who received his BTh from Atlantic Union College in 1942, comes to LLU from Andrews University and the Lake Union Conference where he was director of trust services.

"Trust development for the University or the conference is often misunderstood," says Elder Jenkins. "Our office is viewed by many as a fund-raising function. Actually, we're here to provide a service and help people in an often-overlooked area of education."

"Many people are not aware of the financial advantages available to them in the field of charitable gifts. For instance, many don't know that it is possible to avoid capital gains tax responsibilities through the use of charitable remainder trusts. A donor can have more spendable income during life, while at the same time he makes a substantial gift to the Church."

Reese Jenkins

Will preparation is another service offered by trust development. Elder Jenkins will be happy to assist people in pre-attorney preparation of a will.

Says Elder Jenkins, "It is actually Scriptural to make a will. A properly drawn will is good stewardship. Isaiah, the prophet, came to Hezekiah and pronounced impending death. Without question, the prophet spoke the will of God when he said, 'Thus saith the Lord, Set thine house in order; for thou shalt die, and not live.'" (Isaiah 38:1)

When a person dies without a will, a large portion of his estate may go for taxes, the courts, and administrative expenses.

"Many people believe that their possessions are too small to be considered an estate and that a will isn't necessary. But, regardless of one's possessions,

FFT Has "Circle of Prayer Day"

Sixty-five employees of the Adventist Radio, Television, and Film Center participated in an unbroken prayer circle in mid-November. Faith for Today's "Circle of Prayer Day."

Prayer was made for some 5,000 requests that came into Faith for Today as the result of a letter from FFT Director W. A. Fagal inviting FFT supporters and friends to submit their burdens for intercessory prayer.

Personnel prayed singly and some together in 15-minute segments throughout the day in a designated place. Groupings of request cards were supplied participants, and these created a solemn sense of responsibility and purpose for those entering the prayer room. Many employees picked up the prayer requests the day before to read and to meditate upon the needs presented.

"This special day of prayer proved again to be a real blessing to those who participated," said Elder Fagal. "To be blessed and be a blessing in praying for others is a wonderful thing. We are grateful, too, for our many friends all over the country who were praying for the needs of our ministry on our special prayer day."

Youth Ministry Training Course Set for January

The long-awaited Youth Ministry Training Course is now available. For the past few years, experts in youth ministry have been developing a replacement for the old Senior Youth Leadercraft Course to meet the present needs of local church youth leaders. It is finally complete and ready to be taught.

The Youth Ministry Training Course is scheduled to be held January 13 and 14 at Glendale Academy.

The course features three of the most outstanding youth leaders in the Adventist denomination, Elder Charles Martin, associate youth director of the General Conference, who serves as the general coordinator of youth ministries for the North American Division; Elder Desmond Hills, the General Conference associate youth director who edits the quarterly publication, Youth Ministry Accent; and Elder Paul DeBooy, the Pacific Union Conference youth director and editor of AIDS (Action, Ideas and Dynamic Services).

Elders Lloyd Janzen, Doug Schultz, Harold Duarte and Byron Dulan will also assist throughout the weekend, with various presentations and discussions.

The Youth Ministry Training Course is designed to be a flexible training tool that will benefit the seasoned, as well as the beginning, youth leader. Subject matter includes leadership roles and styles, youth profiles, counseling guidelines, youth council organization, media ideas, and activity ideas for every facet of youth ministry.

No one who is sincerely interested in local church youth ministry can afford to miss this dynamic workshop. Subject used to offset the costs of the course manual, syllabus materials and Sabbath evening supper.

Since space in the course is limited, all applications will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis before the final deadline—Wednesday, January 11.

The Youth Ministry Training Course will serve as the usual Youth Leaders' Convention this winter. There will be other training meeting for youth leaders.

Update . . . from the president

LAY ADVISORY COMMITTEE—On November 28 the Lay Advisory Committee met in the Conference office and approved a report of the Study Committee favoring a large unified camp meeting in July of '78 at Soledad Park. They also discussed and recommended prime-time television exposure for It Is Written beginning January 1 and the large It Is Written Seminar at the Convention Center, March 4 and 5. The first elders of each church, who compose this committee, also discussed the importance of the Review and Herald being available and read in every Adventist family. They discussed a report from the Office Expansion Study Committee and have passed along these recommendations to the Executive Committee for consideration and action. They also received copies of some of the significant Annual Council actions, including the action on evangelism and finishing the work and the action that every church officer and denominational employee should be a faithful tithe-paying member of the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

CENTRAL SPANISH CHURCH FIRE—On Tuesday, November 22, the Central Spanish church was totally destroyed by fire. We regret this significant loss, but are glad to report that there was insurance coverage to care for the major cost of the loss. The church is studying the question of purchasing another used church or rebuilding on the present site. Your prayers will be appreciated for this growing congregation.

WE REGRET to announce the death of Elder G. A. Roberts on Friday, November 18, 1977. Elder Roberts was a president of the Southern California Conference during the years 1932-1936 and served in many other leadership positions in the Adventist Church. He had just celebrated his 100th birthday last June. We regret the loss of this leader among us.

IIW Convocation Set for White

Sabbath afternoon, January 7 at 3 p.m., It Is Written will be presenting an hour of inspiration at the White Memorial church. Appearing with George Vandeman will be Soprano Marilyn Cotton, Associate Speaker E. Lonnie Melashenko, Producer Dave Jones and Field Secretary Royce Williams.

On this occasion, details will be shared of the great media outreach now being planned for Southern California Conference.

This is the only Conference-wide convocation planned for the ambitious It Is Written outreach in 1978. Therefore every church should be represented.

Display advertising in TV Guide will commence the first week in 1978, highlighting not only the weekly telecast, but also the up-coming Revelation Seminars to be held in the Los Angeles Convention Center on March 4 and 5.

Three workers' meetings have already been conducted, laying the ground work for participation by every church. Enthusiasm of the pastors is running high.

This afternoon promises to be one of the most important meetings of Adventists in Los Angeles for 1978. Evangelism of a simple, direct and fruitful nature will be shared that will captivate your imagination. Every Adventist in the Conference should plan to attend, and early in order to be sure of a seat.

Loss Control Representative Appointed by Southern

Safety is of extreme importance to the Seventh-day Adventist denomination. As a Church we face devastating expenses as the result of accidents in our institutions, schools and churches.

These accidents include personal injury, fire loss, and damage to buildings and equipment. They are not only expensive but disruptive to programs and activities carried on by the Church.

Safety is no accident. It is the result of a life style dedicated to avoiding common, daily hazards and adopting methods to avoid accidents.

This is important at home, on the job, at school and at play. It is certainly important where denominational property and personnel are concerned.

Loss Control is a term used by insurance companies for planned programs to avoid the accidents that produce loss. Faced with sky-rocketing insurance costs, this subject has become of prime importance to the Adventist Church as it endeavors to advance the Lord's work with a minimum of costly and disruptive accidents.

To help our denominational workers, students and church members become aware of this many-faceted problem, the Southern California Conference has named Elder A. Ray Norcliffe as Loss Control

A. Ray Norcliffe

Director. A key necessity in this executive appointment is the ability to communicate. As the former treasurer of the Inter-American Division, Elder Norcliffe has a rich background in communicating with individuals, boards and organizations.

While continuing to oversee the auditing work of our Conference, Elder Norcliffe will utilize his administrative skills in a new dimension as he encourages our working together to create the safest and most efficient utilization of the Lord's resources possible.

Academy Students Gather Cans

Hobgoblins, ghosts, and other strangely garbed folk commonly haunt U.S. streets Halloween seeking treats or proffering tricks.

Eighty San Diego Academy students ventured out the Thursday night following Halloween with no disguises and no tricks involved. They were looking for treats, however, as they distributed grocery bags at every home in the community around the Academy with a request that the bags be filled with canned food for the needy.

Students who returned for the pick-ups on Sunday evening, November 6, arrived at the school with over 1,600 cans of food.

Sponsored by the San Diego Academy Student Association, the can drive was suggested by Elder Bob Taylor, counselor, and planned and executed by the student association officers and Bill Keresoma, SA sponsor. SA President Paul-Andre Fountain and Johnny Taitano solicited hundreds of bags from neighborhood markets to use in the can drive.

Students stapled a note to each bag explaining the purpose of the can drive and giving the name of the Academy, identifying it with the Seventh-day Adventist Church. Also stapled to each bag was a colorful Halloween Voice of Prophecy card to be sent in for free Bible lessons.

Students marked each card with SDA initials and have requested to be contacted if any of the cards are sent in to the Voice of Prophecy.

Paul-Andre Fountain says he felt that the drive was successful because of the hard work put into organizing it and the student participation. "People will always give for the needy and the students like to feel that they are participating in something worthwhile," Paul said. Plans are already under way for an even more successful drive next year.

Baskets of food were delivered by students to three needy families. The remainder of the cans were divided among the San Diego Adventist Community Service Centers to be used as needed for welfare work.

"Christian Parents Alone"

Group Is Organized to Assist Single Parents

Last year the La Sierra Chapter of Philosda Club started a much-needed branch called "Christian Parents Alone" (or CPA). Their aim is to help single Adventist parents understand the special problems they and their children encounter and to help them cope in an adequate manner.

To help the children there are outings at which each child is given a Parent For The Day. That parent gives his or her complete attention and lots of love to the child for the day.

Programs for the adults have included discussion groups with guest speakers, ministers, psychologists, lawyers and others who have given help in special areas.

Future plans include guest speakers, films, discussion groups, some social functions and outings for the children, adding up to good Christian fellowship.

CPA meets the second Monday of every month at Hemet Federal Savings Community Room across from the Riverside Tyler Mall.

The next meeting will be held December 12 at 7:30 p.m. The topic "How Do My Children See Me?" will be presented by Elder Roland W. Shorter, associate pastor of White Memorial Church, Los Angeles.

Elder Shorter served in the mission fields in India and Southern Asia and has worked in academies both in the U.S. and overseas.

Please tell your single friends about "Christian Parents Alone." All single parents of any age are invited to attend. For more information, call Bee Linthwaite, (714) 689-1187, or June Hass, 688-0077.

San Ysidro Growth Shown by Recent Church Ground Breaking

The San Ysidro Church is making real progress in its growth. Just a few weeks ago the group reached church status. On November 13 another milestone was reached when they broke ground for their new church on which construction was to start immediately.

Another very significant event took place on that day. This is the first church to be built with the help of the Adventist Layman's Development Group. This organization will loan money to the church at a low interest rate, making it possible for the congregation to go ahead with construction.

Present to represent the Conference were Elder A. C. Cortez, Elder S. A. Yakush and Russ Jensen. Representing the Layman's Group were Attorney Harold Lance, Elder K. H. Livesay, Elder Jay Hoffman and Shirley Deyle.

Elder E. Castillo is pastor of this growing congregation and planned a good program followed by refreshments. Shovels used in the ground breaking were auctioned off to the highest bidders with proceeds going to the building fund.

Barstow Celebrates 40th Anniversary

Friday night, November 18, the Barstow Adventist Church celebrated 40 years of organized work in that community.

Former members and pastors joined with the local church for a Thanksgiving dinner followed by a historical narrative, slides and movies which traced the church and church school progress since 1937.

In reviewing how the Lord has led in the church's past, the congregation found renewed courage toward finishing the work in Barstow.

McVeys Welcomed to Conference

Elder and Mrs. William H. McVey and their beautiful family are now located in Santa Ana where Elder McVey is pastoring the Santa Ana Broadway Church.

Pastor McVey has spent his entire ministry in the Upper Columbia Conference where he pastored churches in Washington and Idaho as well as being conference evangelist for the past four years.

He received BA degrees in theology and communication from Walla Walla College in 1967. Andrews University granted him his master of divinity degree in 1969 and he is now in the process of completing his doctor of ministry degree.

Mrs. McVey is the former Juanita Newman. She has her MA degree in voice performance and has taught voice at Andrews University.

The McVeys have three children, Kenneth, Christopher and Sharean. We welcome this family to our pastoral staff.

Lena Jones Graduates from Academy at Age 80

Whoever heard of anyone receiving his college preparatory (academy) diploma at the age of 80?

This was exactly what happened when Lena Brown Cady Jones was called to the platform of the Sonora Adventist church on October 22.

Pastor Darrell Leamon explained that this special citation was made to honor Mrs. Jones at the "coming out" convocation of the class of 1978 at Andrews Academy in Berrien Springs on September 20.

Since Mrs. Jones could not be present, the diploma and a tape recording of the talk made at that time by Principal Richard Orrison were sent to Pastor Leamon. His presentation and the playing of the tape were timed to coincide as nearly as possible with Mrs. Jones' 80th birthday, October 25.

Among the dozens of birthday cards received by Mrs.

Jones, the mail man delivered one bearing the names of some 100 members of the class of 1978 at Andrews Academy.

How did it happen that Mrs. Jones' diploma was so long in reaching her? The answer to that is best summed up by saying it was because of a technicality.

Lena Cady Jones is presented with her academy diploma by Sonora Pastor Darrell Leamon.

When a review of her transcript showed she had earned a diploma she never received, it was decided to take this way of honoring one who had made a most outstanding contribution to Christian education throughout her lifetime.

Mrs. Jones began her teaching career in the South. Her experiences there are commemorated in a book by Miriam Wood titled When Lena Moved the Cemetery.

At the point in life when most are making plans for retirement, Lena Jones served as dean of girls at Lodi Academy, then as dean of women at La Sierra College.

The night before spring vacation began in 1962, Lena and Floyd Jones were married in the La Sierra church. Her "bridesmaids" were 260 residents of her dormitory. No doubt this set some kind of a record!

Mr. and Mrs. Jones have made their home in the Sonora Community Estates for the past five years.

Couple Leads Others to Christ

Mr. and Mrs. Kim F. Dang of Clovis recently witnessed the 507th baptism resulting from their labors and the work of the Holy Spirit.

Once a devout Buddhist, Mr. Dang attended meetings conducted by Adventist Evangelist Philip Knox in Honolulu, Hawaii, early in 1941. He was baptized into the Adventist Church the following June.

Love for Jesus prompted Mr. Dang into immediate action in sharing his new-found faith with anyone who would study with him. By August, 1955, one-to-one witnessing led to a harvest of 49 persons baptized. Many of those individuals are today lay leaders in Hawaiian churches.

Elder D. A. Delafield, who baptized him 26 years before, presented Kim Dang with the layman-of-the-year trophy in 1967. By that time God, working through Mr. Dang, had prepared 165 individuals for baptism.

In 1967, Dr. and Mrs. Philip S. Ching of Fresno sponsored the Dangs' move to California, where the Dangs joined the Clovis Church. In 1972 the Central California Conference employed Mr. Dang as a Bible instructor.

His wife Florence accompanies him on most studies given in the homes and helps those who need assistance locating Scripture references and writing them out.

Videotape Crusade Ends

A videotaped presentation of Glenn Coon's "Family Communication" series and "ABC Prayer Crusade" was recently completed in the Santa Maria English church.

In the series, Elder Coon shared "seven secrets of family communication." He spoke of effective soul winning, illustrating his points with personal experiences from his ministry.

Church members and visitors alike received blessings from the presentation. A non-member confided to Pastor Ken Smith following one presentation, "This is what we need. We need to touch one another's lives."

Arrangements for a videotaped presentation in your area may be made through Conference Secretary George R. Elstrom, Central California Conference of SDA, Box 580, San Jose, CA 95106.

Fresno Westside Hosts Series

Evangelist L. B. Baker was the speaker during an eight-week series in the Fresno Westside church September 17-November 5. Pastor C. J. Williams was associate evangelist and crusade coordinator.

Shirley Brown and Etta Cheadle served as Bible workers. Miss Brown remains as Bible worker for Fresno Westside, preparing others for baptism and studying with interested families.

Leroy Baker and Harry Dulan served as song directors, with organist Earl Meyers, Jr., and Roderick Hall and Horace Bailey as pianists.

Musical talent included the King's Heralds, Pat and Calvin Taylor, Peggy Baker and family, Patricia Williams, Marguerite Williams, the Bakersfield youth choir, and many local musicians.

Thirty-five persons were baptized. A Bible class began during the meetings and continues each Wednesday evening, and Revelation Seminar classes are held on Monday evenings.

Church members and community were blessed through the series. Miracles of divine deliverance were evident. Three entire families were baptized, marriages saved. There is still power in the preaching of the Word of God.

Leoni Meadows: Update

IF YOU WERE ABLE to visit Leoni Meadows today, you would see men pouring concrete for the septic tank in the recreational-vehicle area. This means the RV area will soon be ready to use! You would also see hammers at work in the cabins and the ranger's house. The base paint is on the ranger's house and the cabins. By the time you read this article, you could go up to Leoni Meadows and see sheetrock going in the cabins and the ranger's house.

Unless you are accompanied by our caretaker, Elmer Truisty, you would not be able to get into the maintenance and storage buildings since all supplies and valuables are now being kept in these locked buildings.

We need to keep the momentum of construction growing at the Meadows through our consistence in giving to the One Per Cent Plan of financing. We are indeed thankful to our faithful members who are giving to the project. God truly blesses our faithfulness. Remember our upcoming December 31 Conference-wide offering.

Dobbins Company Offers Change

If you should come to Sabbath school in Dobbins, you might be surprised to see a sparrow peeking in the window during the early part of the service. This sparrow has been visiting there about the last year and a half.

The newly formed Dobbins Company is a small group in the mountain community of Dobbins dedicated to giving the message to those living in the surrounding forests and canyons. Located in the Sierra about 30 miles northeast of Marysville, Dobbins is on the edge of an abundant recreation area of hunting, fishing, hiking, boating and camping areas.

It is very popular as a retirement center with many families settling the land and starting orchards and gardens. Some church members grow almost their entire food supply for the year from their home gardens. The elevation is high enough to miss the extreme summer heat of the valley, yet low enough to miss the heavy winter snow.

If you would like to live in a rural area not far from a church school, where you can grow your own food, witness for the Lord and escape the congestion of the large cities, visit Dobbins. Come some Sabbath and enjoy the homey, friendly atmosphere of a small church and see the breath-taking view of the mountains and forests.

You may even see the friendly sparrow. He likes to come to Sabbath school.

NORTHERN

Northern's Lay Advisory Council Has Retreat

On the weekend of November 11-13, 150 members of the Northern California Lay Advisory Council along with their spouses met for a weekend retreat at Central California Campground at Soquel.

The Friday night keynote address was given by Elder Mervyn Maxwell of Andrews University, who followed up his presentation the next morning with a Sabbath message on the important place the layman has in God's work. He cited as an example, Paul, who worked for many years as a layman before he was ordained as a minister.

All meetings were chaired by lay members from various parts of the Conference. Conference President Philip Follett outlined the function of the Lay Advisory Council and the work of the Church.

On Sunday morning a number of specific issues were presented. The Council then divided into special committees to study the fields of education, evangelism, finance and planning. Future study by these

The meeting climaxed with the delegates turning in suggestions to make future meetings even more productive. Many expressed their appreciation for the Council, asking that it be Another Lay Advisory Council will convene January 15 to study certain aspects of the plans and philosophy of Leoni Meadows.

Company One

"Mary's Song" To Be Presented

Last Christmas season, Company One, a group of Pacific Union College students under the direction of James Pappas, rented the Vintage 1870 Theatre in Yountville for an interesting and novel evangelistic outreach. Their goal was to reach the general public with the message of the gospel portrayed through live drama.

During the entire week preceding Christmas day, the students presented a spiritual drama written by Mr. Pappas entitled, "Mary's Song." The program accurately covers the span of Jesus' mother's life from her engagement to Joseph, through the miraculous birth of Jesus and her reaction to His entire ministry, death and resurrection.

Original orchestrated music written and conducted by Jeff

Wood and original rear-projected color slides were combined with the live drama to produce an uplifting and touching production.

Due to the response of last year's audiences, Company One will be presenting "Mary's Song" again this holiday season. The program will be produced in the Paulin Hall Music Auditorium on the campus of Pacific Union College, December 17-22 at 7:30 p.m. There will also be a 3:30 p.m. Sunday matinee on December 18.

Tickets are $3 each and may be purchased at the door or in advance either through the Campus Center at Pacific Union College or by writing Company One, Box I, Angwin, CA 94508. Special rates are available for advance sales and for groups of 12 persons or more.

STRESS CONTROL PROGRAMS were conducted in Lodi and Placerville during September and October of this year. These programs included films and lectures presented by Elder Charles Edwards of the Conference health services department. Lectures dealt primarily with the causes, physiology and prevention of harmful stress. Many who attended expressed appreciation for the suggestions given, and one man suggested that he believed it would contribute in a substantial way to his own spiritual renewing. Above, Elder Charles Edwards displays a human model as he explains to a "stress control" audience some of the physiological factors in human stress.

Ului Teulilo of Mesa

Reconversion Stems from Witness of Fellow Worker

Ului Teulilo comes from Tonga Island of the South Pacific in the Australasian Division. He was born into a Seventh-day Adventist family and attended Adventist schools. While attending Beulah College, in Tonga, he was baptized.

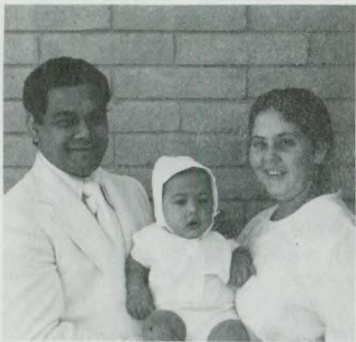

He left Tonga in 1972 for Hawaii and while there he began to follow the ways of the world. In 1975 he found his way to Scottsdale, Arizona where he met Melody, now his wife.

Ului became manager of a Mesa 7-11 Store. He was hiring help for his store when Debbie Mote, a former member of the East Mesa Church, came looking for a job. Inquiring about the job, she asked for Friday nights and Sabbaths off. Ului, rather surprised, said, "You mean you are a Seventh-day Adventist?" She replied, "Yes, I am."

Ului hired her before even filling out an application form or going through the main office, knowing that she would be a good worker and could be trusted.

Ului assured his superiors that a Seventh-day Adventist would be their best worker—then Debbie's work proved that she was.

She also began to share her faith by talking about Christ and what He had done for her, to Ului, every morning when he came to work, and offering to bring him books to read that were written by a lady called Mrs. White.

Ului was very troubled, and very impressed that a young woman could represent her faith so well, and he had failed so much. He was so troubled that he knew he was going to have to get rid of Debbie or accept what she was bringing back to him.

Ului tried to trick Debbie into making a mistake with money, or in the way she handled the customers, actually setting it up for someone to give her a hard time so that he would have an excuse to fire her.

However, she always handled the situation better than he could. When he found he could not get rid of her, he said, "I can't beat them, so I'll join them."

The following Sabbath he was at the East Mesa Adventist church. He approached Pastor Morris Rossier and asked to give his testimony, to relate his story to the congregation.

During the following week, as changes began to take place in his life, Melody asked if he was going to church again, and if she could go too. The following Sabbath found Ului, Melody and Ului, Jr. at church, very interested, and wanting studies so they could be baptized. Ului asked for his Sabbaths off, but the management refused. He quit that job and the Lord is presently helping him find another one.

The East Mesa Church is very happy to welcome this lovely family into their family. Ului and Melody were baptized, and Ului, Jr. was dedicated to the Lord and His service on November 19.

Community Services Keeps Busy

"Be not weary in giving" is an often repeated saying heard throughout the years. Since the 1930s the Honolulu Central Church has provided Thanksgiving food boxes for distribution.

The late Ruth Yemen was one of the early leaders, soliciting different stores for fresh and canned foods for the occasion.

Work began at the Keeau-moku Street church, continued at the Piikoi Street church, and currently at the new sanctuary on Nuuanu Avenue.

Elder and Mrs. L. T. Heaton were pioneers of the work in Hawaii. Their daughter, Margie Maket, has been carrying on this work the past decade.

Community Services assistants Lin Ung Ing, Maria Suganuma, Elizabeth Shim and Shirley Chang prepared 31 food boxes this season. One of the recipients was a family of 15.

The Pathfinders contributed a large amount of canned goods from their Halloween soliciting program.

This work has been done year after year without much publicity. Mrs. Maket states, "We provide temporal food with the hope that someday someone will also find spiritual food in this program."

These brochures are being used in Ingathering.

What about Ingathering?

[From Camelback News, Phoenix, Arizona, but as you read, adapt the information to your own congregation.]
Say, I'm wondering, just what is Ingathering anyhow?

Every year since 1903, Seventh-day Adventist volunteers have contacted businesses and homes in their communities to let the people know about church activities and give an opportunity to contribute. Ingathering's "official" title is the World Services Appeal, and all Adventist churches participate.

What is the money used for exactly? Does any of it stay in Arizona?

Disaster relief, community service centers, education, medical and other services in 193 countries benefit from these funds. Yes, last year over half the funds received in Arizona helped Arizonans! The Seventh-day Adventist Indian Mission School at Holbrook, the Phoenix Valley Community Service Center, Adventist schools, even our own Camelback Welfare Society got a portion of these funds to help in specific areas. The remaining 46 per cent goes to Church's international humanitarian budget.

How does the Ingathering program work?

It varies from church to church; but Camelback's plan this year will be the same as last. The church will be divided into bands of 10 or 12 members each, and each band will have a goal. Groups will go out each evening (except Wednesdays and Fridays) to assigned territory. Sometimes singing bands—groups of adults and children—sing a carol, and then the spokesman talks to the person answering the door. Pastor Brown also makes personal visits to local businessmen, inviting them to contribute.

Is there any other reason for Ingathering besides asking for money?

Yes! Inside each of the Ingathering magazines is an invitation for the reader to enroll in a free Bible study course. And many times, in visiting area homes, families in need are discovered whom our church can help with food or clothing, or in some other area. Others are located who want to know more of what we believe.

Students, Teachers Commended

"The Seventh-day Adventist Church is proud of its students at Pine Forge Academy," said Neal C. Wilson, vice-president of the General Conference for North America, recently.

The Church leader's remarks were spurred by an attack in Boston by club-swinging white men on Black students from the Black Adventist academy in Pennsylvania.

Four Black youths and their 25-year-old teacher were injured on their visit to the Bunker Hill historic monument.

After the attack, Boston Mayor Kevin H. White met with the group and apologized on behalf of the city. The Black students did not resist the attack because of their principles against violence, according to Miriam Battles, wife of the wounded teacher, Charles Battles.

"These young people have exemplified the teachings of Christ, who did not resist the physical abuse of his detractors," Elder Wilson commented. "They have learned the hard lesson that love is a more potent weapon than force in combating prejudice."

Elder Wilson also had kind words for Mayor White. "The City of Boston showed unusual dispatch and care in helping these victims," he said. "I'm sure the students, and their Church, accept in Christian charity his apology on behalf of the city."

NEVADA-UTAH

"Only in the light that shines from Calvary can nature's teaching be read aright. Through the story of Bethlehem and the cross let it be shown how good is to conquer evil, and how every blessing that comes to us is a gift of redemption.

"In brier and thorn, in thistle and tare, is represented the evil that blights and mars. In singing bird and opening blossom, in rain and sunshine, in summer breeze and gentle dew, in ten thousand objects of nature, from the oak of the forest to the violet that blossoms at its root, is seen the love that restores. And nature still speaks to us of God's goodness."

Gerontologist Joins LLU Staff

A specialist in gerontology has joined the department of Health Administration in the Loma Linda University School of Health.

Isao Horinouchi

Isao Horinouchi, PhD, associate professor of gerontology, comes to Loma Linda from the School of Public Health of the University of Hawaii at Manoa, where he was involved with the gerontology program of the department of community health development.

In addition to teaching at LLU's School of Health, Prof. Horinouchi will be initiating, developing, and coordinating a gerontology program for the School. He will also be developing a multi-disciplinary gerontology program in which LLU's Schools of Medicine, Nursing, Dentistry, and Health, and the divisions of behavioral science and religion will work together.

Gerontology—the scientific study of the process of aging and of the problems of aged people—is an area that has been largely ignored by the Seventh-day Adventist Church, Prof. Horinouchi says. He feels that with people living longer, this is a subject to which the church must give consideration.

He believes that the church needs to confirm and support its unique health message by having a gerontology center where research can be done with elderly Adventist members.

"We need to tell the world what our health message has done," Prof. Horinouchi explains, "that our elderly have good health; that they don't have certain types of diseases brought on by certain lifestyles like smoking and drinking."

He believes that at Loma Linda the emphasis should be on the medical/health aspects of gerontology. He would like to see the new Loma Linda Veterans' Administration Hospital become a major placement and training facility, along with convalescent and nursing homes in Loma Linda and surrounding communities.

Prof. Horinouchi sees five dimensions to the gerontology center: (1) research; (2) a training program for young people dealing with the elderly; (3) community services for the elderly, where their needs can be met; (4) workshops among both the Adventist and non-Adventist community to train people to teach others about the problems and care of the elderly; and (5) an international program, because he feels we should be concerned about the problems of the aged in other countries.

Prof. Horinouchi received a BA degree in theology from Pacific Union College in 1953; an MA degree in anthropology from California State University in Sacramento in 1967; and a doctoral degree in sociology from the University of California at Davis in 1973. He has taught sociology and anthropology for the Sacramento Unified School District; Pacific Union College; and Solano Community College in Suisun City, California.

Prof. Horinouchi is married to the former Florence Nakayama; they have five sons.

Corps Establishes Community Clinics

Giving medical care to those who have difficulty obtaining it is the goal of Loma Linda University's Social Action Corps (SAC).

Now in its eighth year, SAC has five weekly clinics established in nearby communities.

Making up the SAC staff are students from the School of Medicine working under the direction of physicians from Loma Linda University Medical Center, along with volunteers in such positions as nurse, receptionist, and social worker.

Says Judy Dimmig, director of SAC, "All the doctors and medical students donate their time. None of the medical students receives any credit for his service. The only benefit is personal satisfaction and practical experience."

"Here is where they see the average, everyday cases that a family practice doctor encounters: sore throats, colds, flu, and physicals," says Miss Dimmig.

Students are eligible to work with SAC after completing a physical diagnosis class. While a licensed physician is always at the clinic, the student makes the primary contact with the patient and then reports to the physician.

"SAC clinics are directed toward low-income groups. A 'drop-in, no appointment necessary' structure is maintained. A donation of $1 is requested for medical problems. A $5 fee is requested for all physicals," says the director.

"We have members of an interviewing and counseling class come to the clinics to take social histories on the patients. Our emphasis is to get students to relate the patient's social background to his medical problem. Previous instances have proved the importance of this," says Miss Dimmig.

Christian and health-related literature is displayed at the clinics but, Miss Dimmig says, "I feel the fact that Loma Linda University is out there and caring is the most positive witness we have."

"Community people are very receptive to the program. We receive referrals from the county health department and other county health department and other county agencies. Also, our facilities are provided at no charge," she says.

Funding for SAC comes from a variety of means. The University Medical Center, Loma Linda University Church, South-eastern California Conference, the city of Redlands, and two local United Way chapters have a part in supporting the clinics. Also, clinic donations help supplement organizational support.

even if they consist only of personal belongings, the distribution of this property, if left to law, will require the appointment of an administrator by the court, and other unnecessary expenses," he says.

"Most people would like to continue their support for causes which they deem important, even after they die. It brings them a great deal of satisfaction to know they have substantially assisted Christian education and other Church projects and that living people will continue to be helped in years to come," says Elder Jenkins.

In working with people, the trust offices don't tell them what to do with their money. "Our objective is to assist them in developing their desires and purposes into whatever form they desire," he says.

problem in the area, compounded by the fact that the natives raise jute, a cash crop, and raise no vegetables.

Capt. Moonere performs dental examinations and provides treatment.

If a patient needs hospitalization, the Mooneres usually hail a passing boat, and ask the occupants to take the patient to Belem.

In emergency cases, a rescue plane based in Manaus is alerted. The American pilot, Dan Walters, responds immediately to the call. Walters pilots his amphibious craft to the pick-up site for the patient, then flies him to the hospital.

Partially funded by the Brazilian government, a new phase of the outreach is being developed. Adventist buses are dispatched from Belem and use the Transamazonia Highway, taking medical care to areas where the program had been unable to reach before.

Thus, a program that began with two missionaries and one launch has grown into a two-phase outreach program that is bringing care to a large portion of Brazil's underserved rural population.

LLU/LA SIERRA

Business Department

Teacher-Student Respect Credited in Growth

In the last six years the number of students majoring in business at La Sierra has doubled.

Today the business department is one of the fastest growing departments on campus with 170 majors, and one of the reasons for the phenomenal growth must be the respect which the teachers and students hold for each other.

According to an accounting major, the department's strength lies in the "down-to-earth teachers who are easy to talk with." When Business Department Chairman Wilfred Hillock describes the program, he emphasizes the importance of student opinion even when discussing faculty. Students evaluate each of the six full-time teachers each quarter.

"We want enthusiasm for our program," Hillock says. Consequently faculty are assigned duties such as student recruitment, placement, and program enrichment in addition to teaching responsibilities.

Extra-curricular activities are an integral part of the plan. Seminars, banquets, river trips, and ski trips are held regularly.

"Each quarter we try to have two events," says Hillock. The activities are sponsored by a business club, and students do not have to belong or attend. But to Hillock these activities are important.

"People in the business world need to relate well with other people," he says. "They need to

City Parish Members Plan Christmas Sing

As their gift to the residents of downtown Riverside, the members of Riverside City Parish are planning a Community Christmas Sing in the International Rotunda of Riverside's famous Mission Inn.

The sing will be held Friday evening, December 16, at 7:30. In addition to the congregational carols, there will be music by a children's handbell choir and the Gillespie Chorus. Special readings and a children's enactment will also be given.

Roasted chestnuts and hot apple cider will be served to help warm the guests as they meet in the rotunda which has no roof.

be involved in outside activities. We feel our program prepares students for such involvement."

Hillock calls the department conservative because students only have the option of majoring in accounting or management (computer science is offered through the math department), but he is not apologetic about the description.

"If each of our teachers had to spend time developing a program in his area of specialty, there would be no time for the special activities."

Hillock has looked for a combination of work experience and academic training in selecting his faculty. Areas of specialization range from computers to economics to accounting to management. The faculty is composed of James Byrd, Robert Ford, Antoine Jabbour, William Key, Harold Phillips, Lanny Stout, and Hillock.

The department's plans for future growth include graduate and external degree programs.
