9th Annual Workshop To Start Wed.

Eight College Delegations To Be Present On Campus

Forty-two students and sponsors from seven colleges will be guests at the annual ASB workshop at Union College April 29-May 2.

This will be the ninth annual workshop of eastern Seventh-day Adventist colleges which was started by the Student Association of Southern Missionary College under the sponsorship of Elder Leif Kr. Tobiassen.

Special guests meeting with the delegates will be Dr. Richard Hamill of the General Conference educational department, and Dr. Floyd Rittenhouse, president of Emmanuel Missionary College at Berrien Springs, Michigan.

The colleges represented will be Atlantic Union, Emmanuel Missionary, Madison, Oakwood, Southern Missionary, Southwestern Junior, Washington Missionary, and Union.

The main purposes of the workshop are to orientate the incoming officers to their new responsibilities and to generally improve the operation of the student associations.

Better college publications in these schools east of the Rockies should be the result of the editorial workshop to be held at the same time. Problems associated with the publication of campus papers and yearbooks will be discussed as the groups meet. Incoming editors of the papers and yearbooks will discuss financial and editorial problems in addition to studying means of meeting the needs of their students in their publications.

The purpose of the Seminar is to coordinate the overall MV policies as effected in the Senior MV Society. An adoption of the working policy will be made, and committees will discuss the various problems of the phases of the society to present new ideas.

Officers from the present societies and those who will serve the coming school year will be present for the meetings which will be held in the College View Church Annex. The visitors will stay in the dormitories on this campus during the Seminar.

The workshop will close on the evening of May 2 with a general assembly and a farewell supper and program.

UC To Participate In CD Demonstration in Lincoln Thursday

Plans are nearing completion for a Civil Defense demonstration, sponsored by the city of Lincoln, to be held 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. April 30. This demonstration will be held in the activities building of Lincoln High School.

The program includes scenes concerning the Red Cross chapter office, the National Guard, hospital emergency room, portable canteens, shelter houses, shelter canteens, the baby's corner, children in shelter, supply depots, and the Red Cross disaster office. The script is written by Lora Trott and Opal Palmer and will be narrated by Bob Johnson of KOLN-TV. The technical advisor for the program is Dorothy Pile, a dramatics teacher from Omaha.

Groups participating in the demonstration include Civil Defense, Lincoln police and fire departments, Highway Patrol, Boy Scouts, Union College, and National Guard. This demonstration is not open to the public. Only Union College, City Council, and state legislative groups will attend.

Transportation from Union College will be furnished.

Student Development Portrayed in Program By UCites at Congress

"The Making of a Man" in four parts, a dramatic production sponsored by Union College, was presented April 23, at the Youths' Congress held in the Pershing Auditorium in Lincoln.

The program portrayed the development of a student from the time he enters college as a freshman until he reaches graduation as a mature adult.

The object of the production was to show through narration, pantomime, dialogue, and performance the various influences and factors of Union College which combine to produce the educated adult.

Robert Bockmann of Aurora, Nebraska, was featured as the typical student of Union College. The program was under the general direction of Sydney Allen of the Religion department. Members of the committee were Dr. J. W. Rhodes,

GC Approves So. Hall Wing

The final approval for the completion of South Hall has been received from the General Conference, according to President D. J. Bieber. The plans call for a new wing that will provide added facilities for both the boys' dormitory and the cafeteria.

It's This Way Practice What You Preach

The question arises, "Do you practice what you preach?" Think about this for a minute. How many of us practice just what we preach? Looking at the actual preaching we do we see that our preaching does not confine itself to just verbal speaking. It is safe to say that we are preaching to a certain extent by our actions around our classmates and friends. Often times actions speak much louder than words.

Let us look at some of the different types of "preachers" we have in our midst. First we have the person who when asked may say, "sure I practice what I preach" but when we observe what he practices and what influence he is exerting we find that this person neither practices anything beneficial nor preaches anything. Second we have the person who thinks he is pretty good, and by good we think of being good in character. But as we get closer to this person we see what influence his preaching has upon others. This type of person definitely is not practicing anything he preaches. Next we see the person who doesn't really care what he preaches as long as he keeps himself in a spotlight before his contemporaries. Again this person is practicing something not beneficial to a school society. Finally we see the person who does practice what he preaches. This person is one who preaches what he believes and practices what he preaches. This person is the kind of person we need more of here at Union College.

As you read these words you may place yourself in one of these categories. If you do place yourself be honest with yourself. If by chance you find yourself in one of the groups mentioned first, challenge yourself to pull yourself up to a higher plane of living. If some place themselves in the last group mentioned, you also have a challenge to meet. First, you must keep your self on that plane, and second you can by your influence and tact help others to help themselves to lift them up on the plane you enjoy.

L.A.H.

The Challenge of the Hour

Today as you receive your CLOCK TOWER you will have already participated in the first two days of the Central Union Youth's Congress. Have you been inspired by the challenge of this meeting?

As you have solemnly repeated many times the Missionary Volunteer Aim, did you think of the solemn promise you made? "Loving the Lord Jesus, I promise to take an active part in the work of the Young People's Missionary Volunteer Society, doing what I can to help others and to finish the work of the gospel in all the world." Are you living up to your off-repeated promise?

Did I hear you saying, "But there's nothing I can do while I'm still in school"? Think of all the Sabbath school, Sunshine band, Literature band, Bible study groups. These are just a few of the many activities. Some little word of yours may be the thing that decides a roommate or fellow student that they, too, want the peace given by Jesus Christ.

Are you willing to take back to your home churches all the inspiration that you are receiving at these meetings? This summer, will you be the spark of enthusiasm that ignites your home church, making the Central Union the spark that ignites the other Unions?

Caroline Essig

Friendliness Plus Christianity

Union College again has held out the inviting hand to those potential students seeking to further their education. Now it is left to us whether or not they will choose Union College for their preparation of a career. Our actions greatly influence this choice.

Being friendly is not the only thing we can do. It is comparatively easy to be friendly. But it seems, at times, as if it is almost a chore to let people know how we stand with God. Maybe we tell our visitors about our Weeks of Prayer, but can they see those weeks in us? Do some of us who kneel beside our beds every night in prayer find ourselves skipping this communion with God just because there are visitors staying with us? It doesn't take any great amount of courage to witness for God, and when those about us are looking up to us, waiting and watching for us to show the part we've played in creating the religious atmosphere of Union, are we going to let this responsibility pass by? Included in this atmosphere are the standards of our school. Do we say with pride we have the highest standards of any school, or do we complain that the rules are too strict? Remember that your visitor also came from a school, and that school also had standards.

As prospective students come on our campus, let's not only show them the friendliness characteristic of Union, but also show them that this is a school that prepares its students for a place in God's great kingdom.

An Open Letter

Commercially the city is booming. The main street, Kurfurstendamm Strasser, looks like any American street, except since it is very wide, cars park both in the middle and on the sides. There is a lot of war damage still visible, but for the most part, it is cleaned out in West Berlin. One of the first things you want to see is the line. So you get a map and head east. You get there, and you can tell it. The West has been so kind as to put up very large signs in several languages telling you that you are about to leave the American, British, or French sectors. These signs appear only at the Russian border, not between the old lines dividing the other portions. There are police stationed here, usually equal numbers on each side. That is, if there are two East police, there are two West also.

Friday night and Sabbath morning you attend the meetings held right there at the sanitarium, and Sabbath afternoon you visit one of the city's many parks. That evening we checked the housing area there, and are considering the eventual possibility of working there.

Sunday you take a tour into the East zone, and see it first hand. You are there just about 12 hours after Kruschew had been there. There were red flags hanging everywhere. You even stand in the same place he stood when delivering his speech. They have only one important street in town, called Stalin Allee. The buildings are new, but have an old Russian architecture. They are very thin, the long side facing the street. When viewed from the side, they remind you of a set for a movie scene. The town itself appears to be not quite so alive, and there are far, far less cars.

The people themselves feel no animosity toward their neighbors on the other side of the line, but the political situation makes things very, very difficult for them.

You manage to get back out the same way you came in without incident.

Now to Vienna! Vienna, the city on the blue Danube, it's truly an interesting city. Here you find culture like you find it nowhere else. They have more M.D.'s than they know what to do with, and that is true in many other fields. They have a different opera playing every night, and they are always sold out. It is really amazing how these people love their music. Because you are in Vienna, you take in one, but naturally it is in German. Then there is the Vienna Boys Choir. If you have enough nerve, you, like us, don't like the cheap seat you bought, and head up for what looks like a deserted choir loft high in the back of the small chapel in which these boys sing. After sitting down, you find to your amazement that this is actually where the choir sings. But you don't chicken out and leave, but get out pad and pencil and take notes like a good reporter. After it is over you even press your luck, and interview the conductor. Info. discovered: There are actually four separate boys choirs, each with its own director. Twenty boys in each one, and they have to hold their place by passing tests about every six months. They range in age from 9-14. The conductor of this one is but 24 years old himself, and seems to be very much on the ball. Some of these little boys also perform in operas, like the one you saw the night before.

That afternoon you decide to try something unique again. Having read the book on the Hungarian revolution, '56, called The Bridge at Andau, you decide to go to this town. It is a very small town located just inside the Austrian border, by Hungary. It was over a bridge here that many of the refugees fled to freedom after the bid for independence failed. Though you don't find the bridge, you do find the border. It is just like you have always heard. The road, already bad, degenerates into nothing; there is a double barbed wire fence, a wide strip of plowed land behind it, and several guard towers in view. It really gives you a thankful feeling that you are on the right

Feature Focus

Jewett to Wield Words for God

by Marvel Jensen

My feature today spotlights Dick Jewett, a person really outstanding in giving sermons.

Dick prefers to begin his life story at the age of thirteen when he became a member of the V. R. Jewett family. Shortly after that the family received a call to the Philippine Islands and for three years Dick lived there. Returning to the States, he came to California and entered the San Pasqual Academy, leaving his mark there on the yearbook which he edited. He was also pastor of his class. Transferring later to Auburn Academy, he was graduated from that school and while enrolled there, served at Theology Club president.

Education was next pursued at Keene, although for Dick it must not have been to elusive because time was available to be pastor of his class there, MV leader, and an honor winner in two other activities. His story for the Youth's Instructor won the grand prize that year, and he walked off with the oratorical contest honor.

When he came to Union, his ability to speak and to form his thoughts into an orderly way for presentation had already been proved. These talents led Dick to choose the ministry for his line of study and profession.

His sophomore year he was class president. Since then he has been MV leader, co-ordinator of MV workshop, S.S. teacher, Student Week of Prayer speaker, and has been on the Student Conference Committee. All of these things take no little ability and effort.

He graduates next year with a major in Theology and a minor in history.

In 1958 Dick married Billie Deming, who was a graduate that year of Union, taking her major in Elementary Education. She is now teaching the 6th grade in the Bethany grade school.

If Dick might lack a little incentive (and he doesn't, I assure you), the example of a father and father-in-law in the ministry would serve to spur him forward.

After graduation Dick's immediate plans are further study at the Seminary, directing that study towards evangelism.

With all the training he is getting, Dick increasingly feels that more and more the layman of the church will be responsible for the saving of souls; that as time progresses, it will be the influence of the church members that will impress the hearts of others and make them receptive to the message the ministers have.

"I feel the influence of friends is very strong. The importance of associations is not on with whom you associate, but rather how."

This is a sobering thought and should be ever-present for each of us.

Swiss Lassies And Laddies Miss Classes

by Gustav Tobler

The law in most Swiss cantons requires children to go to school six days a week. This brings trouble to Adventist children and parents. Until recently there were only two alternatives in most places in Switzerland—either the children had to go to school on Sabbath or the parents had to pay fines or go to prison. In some cases the authorities agreed that the children could make up during the week the material that had been covered on Sabbath. Sometimes parents had to hire a private teacher to give the lessons that the children had missed.

Generally Swiss people are law-abiding people. But on becoming Sabbath-keepers, many parents of school-children risk to get into conflict with the laws of their canton because of their conviction that they should "obey God rather than men." Many Adventist parents did not dare to defy the authorities when it came to the question of sending their children to school on Sabbath. To enter a conflict with the law seemed to many too daring and a losing battle.

But there have been some shining examples of faith and courage. I know parents that paid heavy fines and fathers that went to prison for their convictions.

Now a new day is dawning in Switzerland. The courage and faith of a few is bearing fruit. Their example has been stimulating and had led other Adventists into the path of fearless obedience to God. Their steadfastness has astonished the public. At the same time more intensive contacts on the part of Adventist leaders with government officials, and some battles won in court, prepared the way for more freedom. In the last few years the government in canton after canton modified its attitude toward Adventist parents so that today in most places Adventist children are not forced any more to go to school on Sabbath.

In recent years our denomination is also pushing the church-school program ahead so that more children can obtain an Adventist elementary education.

In most European countries state churches exist that have a powerful influence by certain traditions of forced conformity. This is one of the main reasons for the fact that many Adventists have to fight for religious freedom even in countries that pride themselves on this constitutionally granted right.

Leditor

Dear Clock Tower Editor:

Must we use our front campus as a ball diamond and the entire campus as a waste paper receptacle? Union's campus has been beautiful in the past; whether it will be so this year remains to be seen. Mr. Turner and his crew work hard to keep the campus clean and attractive, but their job will be futile if each of us does not cooperate to keep it so.

Perhaps the Student Association could promote another clean-up drive and plant some "Don't Be a Litterbug" signs to remind us of our duty. With all the ample sidewalks it seems to me that unsightly paths are unnecessary. I should like to see more people take pride in the looks of our campus both inside and outside.

Marilyn Brown

Kappa Theta

By Betty Bell

Before beginning any discussion of life and news from Rees Hall I would like to say, in behalf of all the girls of Kappa Theta, a big welcome to all the visitors on our campus during Youths' Congress. No doubt you visitors have already been welcomed a dozen times or more, but we of Rees hall would like to add our greetings to the list. And speaking of visitors, Union College has certainly been blessed with all kinds of guests in the past three weeks. Most of us in the dorm have a very good idea of how it would feel to live with three roommates in place of just one. I think that almost every girl who has visited in our dorm from an academy has agreed that Rees Hall is certainly a wonderful place to live. Someone overheard two academy girls talking. One was commenting on the beautiful—almost breath taking beautiful—lobby. "Be quiet," the other one said, "Don't make them think you have never seen anything this nice before." Just on more Visitor's day side-line. A girl from SWJC asked one of us if there were any good-looking boys here at Union. She said she just couldn't tell—perhaps this could be blamed on the facial growths that some of you fellows are so fond of.

One of the biggest events recently was the Junior-Senior Banquet. Now I wasn't at the banquet so the next bit of gossip comes second-hand. It seems that Iris Ghaly was so busy talking that she didn't notice that her glass was upside down when she started to pour the milk in. However, someone did tell her before too much damage was done. I feel that some explanation should be made as to the reason for Ann Thomas's red eye. Her date hadn't stepped on her toe and made her cry as many of you may have thought. Sometime Sunday morning she got a little splinter in it which the doctor had to remove. The red eye at the banquet was the result of much rubbing.

We had a very interesting and informative club program not so long ago on hobbies. Three of the girls told us a little about their individual hobby. Judy Bartling collects dog pictures, dog figurines, etc; Bonnie Campbell's specialty is bottles; and Janene Odom, of all things, stuffs animals.

I have one correction to make concerning my last column. Opal Schnell tells me she didn't fall down as I said. She added that she might have tripped but she never quite hit the floor. Senior tests were not as bad as I thought, I guess.

Professor Leif Kr. Tobiassen, chairman of the Religion department, discussed on April 8 "How to Obtain a Call" before the Ministerial Association. Also taking part in the discussion were Professors P. C. Jarnes and Sydney E. Allen. Lewis Anderson, Association president, served as chairman of the discussion which invited many questions from the floor.

Colo. Campus Celebrates 'Springtime in the Rockies'

Sunday, March 29, marked the presentation of a variety program by the Union College Department of Nursing at Denver Junior Academy. The theme, "Springtime in the Rockies," was depicted with a mountain scene as a background.

The capacity audience consisted of hospital personnel, doctors and many from the surrounding communities.

Costumes were worn by many of the participants. Numbers included "Warsaw Concerto," a piano solo by Loelle Anderson, Marlys Ferguson's reading "The Horse," and "The Wind's in the South," a vocal solo by Marilyn Clark. A special feature, presented by the faculty and emphasized with black lighting, was a rope-jumping stunt.

As the curtains closed, students gathered around the piano and sang "Springtime in the Rockies."

Sigma Iota Kappa

By Don Bunch

The arrival of prospective Union College students for '59-'60 dominates the news on the campus scene. May it henceforth be known in print that the men of Sigma Iota Kappa extend to the senior men of the Central Union Academies, who are now guests in South Hall, a very warm welcome and the hearty handshake of male fellowship. (Not intending, however, to exclude the senior ladies, for you, too, are welcome.) The residents of South Hall sincerely hope you all enjoy the remainder of your visit to our college and hope you will return next year.

On-campus visitors in the past week have also included seniors from Southwestern Junior College and Northern Union Academy seniors.

In any room might be found "bull sessions" discussing collegiate life and hashing over old times. And behind the scenes small dramas unfold which are unknown to most but of great significance to those involved, such as the session in this writer's room after the SWJC banquet. SWJCites Jim Armstrong and Monte Burns were debating the question of phone calls back to Keene. It seems Monty was thinking of calling his girl collect, but Jim was dubious as to that plan. Tension mounted and onlookers took sides. The discussion rose . . . but suddenly switched to basketball. The outcome was never learned. Investigation might prove, however, that there were two happy young ladies that night in Harmon Hall, Keene, Texas, praising the talents of Alexander Graham Bell.

Thoughts of phylum Chlorophycophyta, genus chlamydomanas, and methylphenylamine or N-methyl-p-nitrosoaniline were conveniently laid aside at the last Sigma Iota Kappa meeting, and the men were entertained by the hilarious antics of the characters of three cartoons.

Baseball season is here and with it come the enthusiastic sportsmen on the campus lawn. Other signs of spring are the congenial groups gathered also on the campus. Interrupted only by rain or the last trace of winter wind, the groups congregate after dinner and supper.

Actually there isn't much news from South Hall land. All is quiet on the southern front, perhaps because too much vacating during spring vacation. No one has done anything, publishable that is.

Incidentally, former UCites send their greetings from the College of Medical Evangelists to their old friends, classmates, and faculty. This writer, as those who attended the Jr.-Sr. banquet know, vacated to the land of palms and sunshine. However, most of the time there, the sun was rather hidden from sight due to clouds and miscellaneous smoke.

Chuck Holman, a member of the Castle elite, living high above the rest of us, reports news from his upper regions. The fellows up there entertain themselves with fast games of ping-pong, and it seems the unofficial ping-pong champion of the Castle is Cecil Franklin. Recreation is the relaxing power of all students.

In closing may this writer again present a point to ponder: Be not angry that you cannot make others as you wish them to be since you cannot make yourself as you wish others to be.

UC Student Nurses Promote 'Land Rover' For Zorks In Africa

Nursing students of the Union College Department of Nursing have not lost their missionary zeal and spirit for the homeland or for foreign shores. The proceeds from the variety program were set aside for the purchase of a Bible study set to be used by the student nurses. The set includes a projector, tape recorders, screen, and a complete line of films and tapes. Miss Ruth Alt donated $75.00 so that the equipment would be available immediately.

Since quite a sum remained, the student body voted to allocate the money for Warren and Shirley Zork. They are alumni of Union College and are now missionaries at the Sitote Mission in Baratseland, Africa. Transportation in this area is sorely needed. The funds will help to buy for their use a British four-wheel-drive vehicle, "The Land Rover."

Golden Chords Chorale Finish 5-State Tour

The Golden Chords Chorale of Union College returned Sunday from its 12th annual concert tour. The 5-day tour included performances in 7 cities of Nebraska, Kansas, and Missouri.

The Chorale has performed in every state from the Mississippi to the Rockies and from Canada to the Gulf in its concert tours.

According to Director J. W. Rhodes, the program includes numbers from the old masters of choral music, modern composers, old Russian church music and gospel music.

The program will be presented twice in Lincoln—in the First Baptist church, 14th and K, April 26, 7:30 p.m. and in the College View Seventh-day Adventist church, May 16 at 6:45 p.m.

Since Sunday laws are being promoted throughout Nebraska, the Union College Religious Liberty Association was recently organized to help the students meet this challenge to freedom.

Officers elected were Marvin Moore, president; Donald Duncan, vice president; and Bernalda Johnson, secretary-treasurer. This executive committee will further organize and promote the new organization.

"The purpose of the association is to inform students and staff of present problems in the field of religious liberty, and to point out to students specific steps which can be taken by them in their local communities in meeting these problems," states Marvin Moore.

Future plans are to affiliate with "Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State" (POAU), and with the Seventh-day Adventist International Religious Liberty Association.

Centennial Themed At Jr.-Sr. Banquet

The annual Union College Junior-Senior banquet was held at the Cotner Terrace April 12. The theme of the evening program was 'Centennial' in honor of the Lincoln centennial.

A park scene, April 12, 1859, helped set the mood. Bouquets of pink snapdragons and black silhouettes were the table decorations. Many of the students came costumed for the period.

The film, "Jackie Robinson," was shown. Dinner music was provided by Van Knauss and Don Duncan. "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree," sung by Janene Odom, also contributed to the centennial spirit.

side when you look across. And don't believe those towers aren't manned. You see it is time to leave very fast when you notice two armed men come down the tower and start over to where you are at a good healthy gait.

After these two trips we both appreciate our land of freedom more than before. We might add, we do welcome any mail from the homeland.

Led by Sheldon Anderson, the Union College frosh romped over the Northern Union academy seniors 56 to 35 in the annual College Freshmen-Academy Senior basketball game.

Early in the game the Freshmen ran up an eighteen-point lead at 24-6, but Jim Fankhanel from Maplewood Academy began finding the range and brought the Seniors to within 11 points at halftime with 27-16.

The Freshmen dominated play the entire game and were never in danger of being overtaken. Sheldon Anderson was a high-point man for the Frosh with 16 points, and Jim Fankhanel hit 15 for the academy Seniors.

After Graduation

Christy Taylor, a Union College ministerial graduate, has been assigned by the United States Air Force to the chaplaincy at the Keesler Air Force base, Biloxi, Mississippi. Chaplain Taylor graduated from Union College in 1947 and took advanced work at the Adventist Seminary in Washington, D.C. He has been a minister in the North Dakota and Minnesota Conferences and more recently with Air Force Chaplaincies in Texas and Japan.

Marvin and Sylvia Ford-Larson, class of 1950, spent a recent week end on the Union College campus. They have spent their furlough obtaining more hospital training in preparation for their new work in the Inter-American Division. They will return shortly to that field, where Mr. Larson will be the administrator for the new 30-bed hospital in Nicaragua.
