NO. 7

By E. M. Hause, Ph.D.

The new year presents to the world a notable prospect for a better year than the last one. Very aptly but without originality did President Truman recently refer to this year 1946, the year of peace, as the "year of decision.

Although Congress was scolded by the President for its poor record in domestic legislation, he commended it for the fine array of constructive legislation in the international field. Truly since the cessation of war less than a half year ago measurable progress has been made by our government and by the victor nations in establishing a peace-

The most complicated problem -one that arose in the fag end of the war against Japan-the disposition of atomic power, has for the present been formularized. A committee working within the United Nations Organization will be given control of the secret of harnessing atomic energy, with all other similar secrets. The committee will regularly inspect the activities of all nations who are developing atomic processes so that these cannot be used for destructive purposes; hence, whether or not Russia or any other nation invents a super atomic bomb will be of no ma terial consequence inasmuch as the knowledge will become the common property of all nations. Of course, unforeseeable complications are bound to arise but are also bound to be settled if statesmen will to keep the Many problems of international scope have recently been settled, or are in the process of being settled, or need yet to be settled. Now that the UNO Assembly has just begun its work in London a medium exists through which vexatious issues can be solved. ### Where Were You?

Time and again it has been brought to our attention that the Friday evening Seminar and Mission Band meetings have been carried out with only a meager attendance. It must be indeed discouraging for the leaders and student speakers to carefully plan a program and to have a disappointingly small attendance

Where were you? Or where was I? Out of five hundred students there most assuredly are more than eighty-two who should

Is our Christian experience so strong that no benefit can be derived? Have we reached a plane of perfection which automatically excludes us from that class of individuals needing spiritual fortitude?

Or. Have we so little interest in spiritual matters that we do not become interested? Dead indeed must be the heart that is not inspired by the heart-to-heart sermons given by those who feel their topic. Can the "lukewarmness" refer to you or me, the heralds of this message?

Something is wrong! Time is surely no excuse, for all secular things are stored away preceeding the coming of the Sabbath-or are they? And none of us are too busy with duties for the coming day to consistently remain from these most inspirational services. Perhaps we feel that too much religion is requiring our attention, and if any follow the counsel Sister White gives regarding an hour of Bible study daily their excuse might be justified.

Honestly, now, are we dead at heart; is our spiritual thinking warped? Think it over, friend o'mine-and come!

Letters to the Editor

As a ministerial student, I can deeply appreciate one of your platform statements, "A Stronger Ministerial Association." Many others believe with me that this is the greatest disappointment in our Theological training. Other schools have good seminars, why not here, too?

Unfortunately, I can speak from my experience. I am now taking my upper-division training, part of which is Field-Evangelism. Time and again as one stands before an audience, the lack of seminarial experience is very apparent. Why can't our audiences say of us that we are ministering to them instead of just practicing on them?

There are freshman and sophomores who can be saved from Sincerely, this situation.

What remedy do you advocate? The most reliable source to which you may go for a solution to your problem would be to the head of the religion department.

William Harris

February 4, 1928 - January 9, 1946

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them."

Bill Harris, freshman ministerial student, died at Madison Sanitarium, Madison, Tenessee, January 9. His age was 17. Nashville, Tennessee was his home.

Bill was staff artist on the CLOCK TOWER at the time of his sudden illness and death. He had always been active in school activities. He graduated last year from Madison Junior College, Madison Tennessee, and was president of his class. He was a member of the Seventh-day Adventist church.

He leaves his father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Harris of Nashville; two brothers, Charles and Buddy, of the home; and a sister, Mrs. Raymond Osborne, of Chadron, Nebraska.

Bill was laid to rest by the side of his mother in Nashville.

Members of the CLOCK TOWER staff, students and faculty, mourn the loss of their fellow student, associate and friend.

A very timely New Year's message was given in chapel on January 1 by Dr. Hause, of the college history department, He spoke on "The Atomic bomb and Civilization." The effect of this world-shaking event of 1945 was likened to the upsetting of a checkerboard in the midst of the game. Dr. Hause stated that atomic energy, rightly used, will make the world a much better place in which to live.
